Hi Nick,

I would love to sit in on the mobility hub meetings. Please include me on the meeting notices and agendas. I can make the September meeting.

Thanks!
Rena

That's great! Thanks, Kent. Let me check in with Claire Bowin, in our citywide planning team, regarding the next agenda and I'll be back in touch as soon as I know more. If the September meeting doesn't work, perhaps we could look to October? The mobility hubs working group meets monthly on that Thursday from 2-3:30pm.

Talk soon,
Nick

We would be really excited about participating in your work on mobility hubs The 9th St corridor between Main & Los Angeles is a great location for a pilot project
We'd be happy to go to a workshop (our Board meeting is that day noon to 1:30)
These hubs are definitely the future for transportation downtown
Thanks for reaching out to us

Hi Kent,

The City is working with a variety of interested parties to try to advance the concept of "mobility hubs" -- transportation nodes that provide access to a variety of different transportation options and services that can help improve mobility options. Attached is a draft memo outlining some of the concepts. There is now a working group meeting monthly (next one is on 9/17) and they are looking for additional groups that could be interested in partnering on some pilot projects, particularly in Downtown. At the last working group meeting, the Fashion District BID, and potentially the California Market Center, were mentioned as places and organizations that might be interested in this topic.

Happy to chat more on the phone, if you have time. Perhaps we could have you attend a future meeting of the working group to get your take? I also reached out to Jessica Lall about trying to present the concept at a future meeting of the BID Consortium, since I think there could be some good partnership opportunities with BIDs across the City. Let me know what you think.

Thanks!
Nick
